Jayne Perrin's career in surveying has been all about jumping in the deep end and she has selflessly given time to S+SNZ over the 28 years of her career. She has always said yes and taken on the challenge. As a result, she has made a lot of valuable contributions, in a lot of different places.

Whatever the role she was required to perform or that she sought out for herself, or volunteered for, Jayne brought her energy, experience and commitment. Jayne has worked in a wide range of jobs which speaks to her capability and adaptability. She has been an active member in six branches so far and Members who have worked with Jayne hold her in the highest regard and deserving of the recognition of fellowship.

Her impressive legacy started when Jayne first commenced as a Councillor in 2008 – a role that she continued until 2013 during which she was a public relations committee member and an Award of Excellence judging panel member and convenor. Jayne was an influential team member working on progressing member participation of the awards which recognised and rewarded innovation and dedication to the surveying profession.

Jayne was part of the 2010 NZIS delegation that went to the Sydney FIG conference and, six years later, Jayne was member of the international FIG Working Week committee. This was a huge undertaking for the Canterbury Branch and NZIS culminating in a very successful event that hosted over 1200 international and national delegates.

In 2017 Jayne became one of the founding Trustees of the Kairūri Community Trust and remained as a Trustee until 2022 helping to establish the Trust and its goals of supporting the profession, creating equal opportunities for gender, ethnicities, social or economically disadvantaged people. Others causes include research, scholarships, and school programs essential to advance the science behind our industries.
